

Abstrac

This research will describe the evaluation of bureaucratic reform in Indonesia, especially how the government bureaucracy that is separate from political interests. The fall of the New Order regime showed how well the process of spreading democracy throughout the territory of Indonesia. Civil society tried to create and reconstruct the political system based on democratic principles, including how to make an independent bureaucracy. In fact, in the reform era there were many cases of political co-optation in the bureaucratic system. Indonesian Bureaucracy is highly politicized, the shape-also vary, such as the use of public facilities for the activities of political parties, political mobilization in the elections, based on the interests of the promotion campaign for the recruitment of public officials, and the removal of career officers of the government institutions that is highly political.

Key Words: politicized bureaucracy, civil servants, bureaucratic reform